kind. "Mr. town is good town," as we call it, and, indeed, if human nature could be spared for a while from the almost hourly round of the news columns of modern life, it might be possible to recapture the old spirit of tolerance and goodwill now so missing from our midst.

It has become a habit to deride the Christian church with failure to meet the situations of modern life. Whether this be true or not, the child born in a Jerusalem man and who, as the man Christ died on the Cross 197 years ago, had done an ethical code which, if practised, instead of being allowed more life service by mankind generally, would surely result in "Peace on earth, and goodwill to all men."
